Sharing experiences on COP14... and more!

an event by COP14 Staff/Volunteers

The CEPA Fair welcomes you to a session starring our wonderful COP14 Staff/Volunteers, who reflect on their participation and experiences at COP14, and give their ideas for future action. Take a moment and drop by to show your appreciation!

Part 1: Monday, 26 November 2018, 4.30pm

1. The future of biodiversity in Africa

This presentation speaks about Africa as a continent. What do we know about Africa? What is the difference between Africa and other continents? How is Africa's BIODIVERSITY? How do you see Africa in the future?

Speakers: Mr. Ahmed ElBagoury, Mr. Mohamed Ragab, Ms. Azzahraa Ahmed

Part 2: Wednesday, 28 November 2018, 3.00pm

1. Biodiversity in Egypt, South Sudan and Comoros

A group of youth from Bibliotheca Alexandrina and Alexandria University presents the beauty of biodiversity in Africa, and sheds light on threatened species in Egypt, South Sudan and Comoros.

Speakers: Mr. Fares M. Al Makrahy, Mr. Abraham Makoi, Mr. Ahmadin Fakkih.

2. Insect Diversity

Insects are important because of their diversity, ecological role, and influence on agriculture, human health, and natural resources. They have been central to many advances in science. Insects create the biological foundation for all terrestrial ecosystems. They cycle nutrients, pollinate plants, disperse seeds, maintain soil structure and fertility, control populations of other organisms, and provide a major food source for other taxa.

Speaker: Ms. Passant Essam Mahrous

3. Health and biodiversity

We explore the relationship between humans and bacterial flora.

Speakers: Ms. Abeer Sayed Hussein Ahmed

4. Human-caused disturbances to ecosystems

The presentation describes the harm caused by pesticides to biodiversity

Speakers: Ms. Menna Hassan Rashad Faheem
