The 7th meeting of the Global Partnership for Business and Biodiversity

The 7th meeting of the Global Partnership for Business and Biodiversity was co-organized by the CBD, ORÉE and hosted at the French National Museum of Natural History in Paris, France on 23-24 November 2017. The first day welcomed 14 out of the 21 national and regional initiatives and provided an opportunity for each initiative to share their experiences and practices over the past year, as well as their plans going forward.

It was also a chance for the partnership to hear first-hand about the activities of the secretariat, in particular plans for the next COP and Business Forum, other engagements regarding mainstreaming in the key sectors of energy and mining, infrastructure and manufacturing and processing and ongoing research on biodiversity reporting. The Global Partnership members identified areas for collaboration and were eager to share information going forward. The SCBD is working on a more user-friendly business website where more information can be accessed and shared from the Global Partnership and other related organizations.

The meeting elected a new Chair of the Executive Committee of the Global Partnership, with George Jaksch representing Mesoamerican taking over from Elisa Dezolt from Brazil. The Executive Committee will play an active role in reviewing the current status of the partnership and contributing toward the planning of the Business Forum taking place at COP 14 in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt.

Day 2 of the meeting welcomed representations from government, NGOs and the business sector. Participants heard about the history of the Global Partnership, the French government's commitment to biodiversity and the current developments and preparations leading to the post 2020 global framework on biodiversity.

The meeting also addressed ongoing work by the Secretariat on business reporting on biodiversity and examples were given from French businesses such as EDF on what and how they report on biodiversity.

Information about the Business Pledge was shared as well as a session on the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the links to biodiversity.

The focus then shifted to the mainstreaming in key sectors related to business planned for COP 14: energy and mining, infrastructure and manufacturing and processing. Examples of mainstreaming were given and challenges and opportunities addressed.

The meeting finished with speakers from related projects such as the Natural Capital Coalition and UN Environment.

Yili also participated at the UN Biodiversity Conference (thirteenth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity) held in Mexico in 2016 and was one of the initial signatories to the Business and Biodiversity Pledge launched there.

The Yili "Green Industry Chain" strategy is being promoted to guarantee implementation of the concept of biodiversity conservation. For Yili, "green" represents the industrial ecology featuring sustained and sound development; "industrial chain" highlights the values and behavioral patterns of stakeholders upstream and downstream.

German 2018 Business Dialogue Forum on Biological Diversity

On 13 March 2018, representatives of companies, leading business associations, nature conservation organizations, government and authorities, academia and civil society will gather in Berlin for the 8th German Business Dialogue Forum on Biological Diversity. Led by the Federal Ministry for the Environment, the dialogue forum is the annual event of “Enterprise Biological Diversity 2020”, the dialogue and action platform for business federations, nature conservancy organizations and authorities. The conference, hosted by the Ministry, is organised by the business network ‘Biodiversity in Good Company’ Initiative.

Cristiana Paşca Palmer, CBD Executive Secretary, will speak via video message on “Engaging the Private Sector for Biodiversity“, followed by high-level speakers from the German government and the European Commission. Many organisations will present a range of best practices. Breakout sessions will focus on biodiversity in supply chains, partnerships between business and NGOs, as well as current issues pertaining to nature conservation regulation.

As part of Germany’s outreach strategy, the UBi 2020 platform has been significantly expanded in recent years, with 35 supporting organisations on board as of January 2018. Supporters have the chance to meet regularly in three working meetings per year.

Government Dialogue on Natural Capital, Edinburgh, 27 November 2017

For the first time at the World Forum on Natural Capital, governments came together to discuss how they could jointly scale and speed up natural capital approaches. They identified key issues for collaboration, including: linking natural accounting at the national level (using the UN-SEEA framework) with the corporate level (using the Natural Capital Protocol); working with branches and sector organizations at sectoral levels, both nationally and internationally; using existing natural capital hubs to share best practices from governments and jointly develop a natural capital positive storyline that can be tabled at appropriate international fora. They will convene again next year.

New EU Community of Practice Finance and Biodiversity

The financial sector is a strong enabling sector when it comes to integrating biodiversity profitably into business. It plays a key role when it comes to generating new financial arrangements to support innovative business models or integrate new risks in the assessment of existing practices. A series of initiatives have emerged in recent years in order to encourage financial institutions to integrate the risks associated with biodiversity and natural capital into their investment decisions. Building on these early calls, financial institutions are looking for next steps on how to integrate biodiversity into their risk assessment strategies and investment strategies.
